If going to France's Provence isn't on the cards for you this fall, The French Manor Inn and Spa is just like the real thing, but closer to home. There are 19 individually designed room and suite choices spread out over the manor, carriage house, La Maisonneuve and Le Spa Forêt. The dining room features a stunning 40-foot vaulted ceiling offset by two massive fireplaces and award-winning French cuisine (it's the type of place where you have to wear a jacket for dinner).

One of the most unique experiences to be had at this property is Spa Forêt. Located atop Huckleberry Mountain and nestled among ancient trees, Spa Forêt is a completely green concept, from its construction, plumbing and saltwater pool to its all-natural spa products. Nearby attractions include the sweeping Pocono Mountains, with hiking trails, quaint antiques villages and even a sizable outlet mall. Overnight rates from $190, thefrenchmanor.com, @frenchmanor

Rhode Island

Of course there is no rule that fall's best foliage destinations must be inland. Sweeping ocean vistas appeal in every season, especially in oh-so-classy Newport, R.I., home to America's finest mansions. Much like the mansions, each of the 20 rooms at The Chanler at Cliff Walk is designed in reference to a historical period, from Gothic to Renaissance, and some even feature their own outdoor hot tubs. There are two dining options: The more formal Spiced Pear and The Cliff Walk Terrace, arguably the best ocean-view alfresco resto ever (the design is adorable; the food amazing; and it even has throws on the chairs for if you get cold!). And when you're done ogling the palaces of America's aristocracy, there's plenty to do in Newport. You can hop aboard a Prohibition era rum bootlegger's boat, tour the servants' quarters of a Newport estate (a la Downton Abbey) and top it all off with sundown cocktails at the chic rooftop of the Grace Vanderbilt hotel. Ask about the Fall in Love package, starting at $539, to really sweep that special someone off his or her feet! Overnight rates from $485, thechanler.com, @thechanlerhotel
